

Suttons Seeds

Many years ago, crowds of people crowded around one shop and one shop in particular! It was unlike any other shop that sold Indian seeds in an England shop! People loved this shop, they explored which ones they liked but they never had a frown on their face. They always went home with a grin from ear to ear. Once they planted it, it grew, it grew and when it was done, they explored it like it was a jungle or a rainforest! The door represented it all. The golf on it was beautiful and the writing was exotice like the plants but all food things had run out of business. Fewer and fewer people came and at one point no one came so the shop owner shut it down and it was forgotten forever...

Aiden – Geoffrey Fields Junior School

Supported using public funding by
ARTS COUNCIL
ENGLAND